Market Environment

Treasury rates continued to respond to investors' predictions for forward-looking Federal Reserve (Fed) interest rate decisions. Strong economic data and still-high inflation data caused investors to continue to shift towards a "higher for longer" disposition for the remainder of 2024. Investors still believe the Fed will cut rates by 50 basis points¹ during 2024, but the anticipated amount of rate cuts was 150 basis points at the start of the year. Longer-term interest rates increased across the yield curve to reflect those changes in expectations. Shorter duration fixed income indexes generated positive returns during the second quarter while longer duration indexes experienced negative total returns. Excess returns to credit were generally positive with two notable exceptions: agency mortgage-backed securities (MBS) and long duration corporate bonds.

¹ Basis points (bps) is a unit that is equal to 1/100th of 1% and is used to denote the change in a financial instrument.

Unless otherwise noted Excess Returns are the returns in excess of duration matched Treasuries.

Credit conditions remain accommodative. High yield default rates remain subdued and continue to be concentrated among CCC-rated issuers, although default rates for all rating categories are below their respective long-term averages. Economic data remained strong, with inflationary pressures persisting and few signs of recession on the horizon. Headline consumer inflation prints have been declining, but wage growth and job openings remains higher than historic averages and could still exert upward pressure on inflation. The Chicago Fed National Activity Index remains above its recession indicator. The U.S. consumer appears to be strong, with loan delinquency rates generally rising off very low bases and not indicating widespread issues. Auto loan delinquency rates rose to their highest levels since 2009 but are within expected ranges for Asset-Backed Securities (ABS) to withstand losses without risk of impairment to bondholders. Business loan performance appears healthy, as delinquency rates are low and default rates are declining. Office delinquency rates remain elevated, while non-office commercial mortgage delinquency rates rose moderately. Return to office dynamics remain weak and continue to pressure office real estate values. The weakening office market has not had an outsized impact on banks' commercial real estate loan portfolios to date, as delinquency rates and charge-offs have been muted.

Valuations

We are finding fewer opportunities in traditional segments of the credit markets as risk spreads remain narrow and net issuance is low. According to our Valuation Framework,² the percentage of investment-grade corporate bonds that screened as a "buy" remained near to 13%, and the percentage of high yield corporate bonds that screened as a "buy" in our Valuation Framework increased to 20% from 16% at the start of the quarter. No cohort of 30- or 15-year agency MBS met our Valuation Framework for purchases at quarter-end.

Exhibit II: Outlook by Sector

Sector	Outlook	Positioning
Reserves
U.S. Treasuries/Futures/Reserves	Hold when attractive credits unavailable	Held to balance yield curve and duration exposures
Government-Related	Unattractive valuations; better opportunities elsewhere	No positions in portfolios
Municipal	Valuations of select municipals are attractive for inclusion in taxable portfolios	Holdings include transportation revenue bonds
Structured Credit
U.S. MBS	No buy opportunities in 15- and 30-year fixed rate segments of agency MBS markets	No positions in portfolios
RMBS	Continued credit and valuation concerns	No positions in portfolios
CMBS	Opportunities arising among property types with differing credit dynamics	Hold positions in SASB CMBS deals where we have transparency into collateral dynamics
ABS	Opportunities remain in select sectors despite the recent narrowing of risk spreads	Hold positions across diversified set of nontraditional segments
Corporate Credit
IG Corporate Bonds	Index credit spreads remain at low levels, attractively valued opportunities in benchmarks are scarce	Holdings remain in some interest rate sensitive sectors and among certain security selection opportunities
HY Corporate Bonds	Index spreads widened with low default rates and low net issuance, slightly increasing available opportunities	Opportunities tend to reside in industries with challenged business models that require strong credit work
Other Credit
Emerging Markets	Concerns remain about creditor rights in most emerging market countries	No positions in portfolios

² Our valuation framework is a purely quantitative screen for bonds that may offer excess return potential, primarily from mean reversion in spreads. When the potential excess return is above a specific hurdle rate, we label them "Buys" (others are "Holds" or "Sells"). These ratings are category names, not recommendations, as the valuation framework includes no credit research, a vital second step.

There remain opportunities in select subsectors of the market. Investment-grade corporate bonds in several interest rate sensitive subsectors, such as life insurance, banking, and finance companies, continue to offer attractive opportunities. In the structured credit markets, we continue to find opportunities in select sectors despite the recent narrowing of risk spreads. Opportunities are arising in the commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS) market as investors are differentiating among property types with differing credit dynamics.

We continue to avoid emerging markets credits due to concerns over creditor rights in most countries and its impact on their durability. We continue to avoid non-agency residential mortgage-backed securities (RMBS) due to poor technical factors, and weak fundamentals, underpinned by poor housing affordability, low inventory of homes for sale, and stable-to-declining home prices.

Performance

Security selection drove results during the quarter. Subsectors that contributed included high-grade bonds issued by specialty finance companies, life insurers, banks, property and casualty (P&C) insurers, and food and beverage companies. No subsector detracted in a measurable way during the quarter.

The Fund's sector and rating emphases contributed to relative results during the quarter. The Fund was overweight to strong-performing segments of the investment-grade and high yield corporate bond markets.

The Fund's duration profile contributed to total returns but detracted from relative returns as shorter duration bonds had a positive return but trailed 1 – 3 year Treasuries slightly during the quarter.

Transaction Summary

We continued to find durable credits³ offering attractive value despite weak attractiveness of valuations of credits in Indexes. The purchases were made across a variety of sectors and industries. The table below summarizes a few notable portfolio additions.

Concluding Remarks

An environment like this can test the resolve of credit investors. Credit conditions appear relatively benign and issuance is robust, leading even the most disciplined investors to question the virtues of a valuation discipline when no observable risk event appears on the horizon. Opportunities remain, yet the importance of calibrating valuation and credit discipline is of utmost importance when conditions appear calmest.

Sincerely,

Risks

Investors in the Fund should be able to withstand short-term fluctuations in the fixed income markets in return for potentially higher returns over the long term. The value of portfolios changes every day and can be affected by changes in interest rates, general market conditions and other political, social and economic developments.

Investing in the bond market is subject to certain risks including market, interest-rate, issuer, credit, maturity, call and inflation risk; investments may be worth more or less than the original cost when redeemed. Bond prices are sensitive to changes in interest rates and a rise in interest rates can cause a decline in their prices.

Bond prices may be sensitive to changes in interest rates and a rise in interest rates can cause a decline in their prices. Investing in the bond market is subject to certain risks including market, interest-rate, issuer, maturity, call, credit, and investments may be worth more or less than the original cost when redeemed.

Asset-Backed Securities ("ABS") are subject to risks due to defaults by the borrowers; failure of the issuer or servicer to perform; the variability in cash flows due to amortization or acceleration features; changes in interest rates which may influence the prepayments of the underlying securities; misrepresentation of asset quality, value or inadequate controls over disbursements and receipts; and the ABS being structured in ways that give certain investors less credit risk protection than others.

SASB lacks the diversification of a transaction backed by multiple loans since performance is concentrated in one commercial property. SASBs may be less liquid in the secondary market than loans backed by multiple commercial properties.

The Fund also invests in derivative instruments, investments whose values depend on the performance of the underlying security, assets, interest rate, index or currency and entail potentially higher volatility and risk of loss compared to traditional stock or bond investments.

Non-U.S. investing involves special risks including currency risk, increased volatility, political risks, and differences in auditing and other financial standards.

Illiquid investments subject the Fund to the risk that it may not be able to sell the investments when desired or at favorable prices.

There is no assurance the Fund will achieve its investment objectives.

Complete information on the Fund's risks and expenses can be found in the prospectus.

The decision to invest in the fund should take into account all the characteristics or objectives of the fund as described in its prospectus
